

THE SERVICES

Imagine, create and sustain your garden. A catalogue of Orizon services and distinctive starting points.

BEAUTIFUL · LIVING · ENDURING GARDENS

One garden, many paths

Your garden may not fit any one service exactly. That is natural. These are starting points that help you recognise your situation and open the right conversation.

01

See clearly

When questions accumulate.

02

Help the garden evolve

When it lacks coherence.

03

Enjoy it with peace of mind

When it occupies too much of your attention.

04

Transform

When you want to create a new place to live outdoors.

Nine worlds, one exacting standard

Three services are brought into focus in each world, followed by other ways in that can be composed with you.

01	See clearly	AUDITS & DECISIONS
02	Imagine & transform	DESIGN & CREATION
03	Family & living world	WAYS OF LIVING
04	The art of outdoor living	ATMOSPHERE & USE
05	Bring the project to life	LANDSCAPING & COORDINATION
06	Support & share	ADVICE, STEWARDSHIP & KNOW-HOW
07	Through the seasons	SEASONAL APPOINTMENTS
08	Specialist care	MATERIALS, DETAILS & USE
09	Keep the garden alive	YEAR-ROUND SUPPORT

The garden audit

“I feel my garden could be better, but I do not know where to begin.”

WHAT THIS CHANGES

An overall reading of what works, what is tiring the place and what genuinely deserves to change. You leave with priorities, not a list of works.

When questions accumulate, the first luxury is a simple, independent and prioritised reading.

Two ways into the same world

When questions accumulate, the first luxury is a simple, independent and prioritised reading.

01

Before you buy

“The garden attracts me, but I worry about hidden water, care and works.”

Reveal potential, fragilities and future decisions before committing to the property.

02

Water & climate

“My garden uses too much water and struggles more each summer.”

Identify waste, vulnerable planting and cooling levers for a more resilient garden without austerity.

Other horizons

Each starting point connects a real situation with a clear promise. The right form is then composed with you around the garden.

Living plant heritage

Understand the condition and future of valuable trees and plants.

Care under control

Put maintenance practices back in service of the project.

An independent eye

Resolve conflicting opinions without a vested interest in selling work.

Garden in transition

Plan gradual change without erasing the spirit of the place.

Residential grounds

Build a shared trajectory for common landscapes.

Summer comfort plan

Reconnect shade, soil, planting and outdoor use.

Plant succession plan

Prepare the next generation of major trees and plants.

Bespoke garden design

“I want a garden that feels like mine, not a copy of what is everywhere.”

WHAT THIS CHANGES

Layout, materials, planting and light create a singular identity attuned to your way of life.

Transforming a garden without losing its soul requires one vision, composed with the place and with time.

Two ways into the same world

Transforming a garden without losing its soul requires one vision, composed with the place and with time.

01

Metamorphosis

“The garden has potential but lacks coherence, presence and life.”

Reveal what is there, repair ruptures and recompose uses without making the place feel erased.

02

Living Mediterranean

“I dream of a Mediterranean garden, but not a dry or static décor.”

A generous climate-adapted palette, less water and more life, with beauty that remains natural.

Other horizons

Each starting point connects a real situation with a clear promise. The right form is then composed with you around the garden.

Garden in scenes

Use thresholds, framing and pauses to create several experiences.

The jewel box

Give a small space intimacy, relief and abundance.

Heritage garden

Write the next chapter of an old garden with discretion.

A horizon in stages

Phase an ambitious project without losing final coherence.

First impression

Recompose arrival, views and movement to reveal the place immediately.

The Orizon kitchen garden

“I would like to harvest from the garden without adding an awkward area.”

WHAT THIS CHANGES

A beautiful, productive kitchen garden integrated into the landscape, with simple gestures and legible seasons.

Some gardens are drawn around harvesting, growing, sharing, observing and giving more room to life.

Two ways into the same world

Some gardens are drawn around harvesting, growing, sharing, observing and giving more room to life.

01

Growing outdoors

“The children have space, but few reasons to invent their own games.”

Paths, refuges, materials and freedom of movement create a garden at a child's scale.

02

The living refuge

“I want more life in the garden, without a wild effect or constant constraints.”

Local plants, respected soils, restrained water use and discreet habitat form an elegant ecosystem.

Other horizons

Each starting point connects a real situation with a clear promise. The right form is then composed with you around the garden.

The family home

Create a flexible landscape for several generations.

The intimate refuge

Restore privacy through planting, relief and framing.

The secret garden

Reveal a hidden place to read, breathe or disappear for a moment.

Growing safely

Protect children without impoverishing their freedom to explore.

The water setting

“The pool exists, but its surroundings feel separate from the garden.”

WHAT THIS CHANGES

Connect water, house and landscape so the pool becomes a calm scene within the garden.

When the garden becomes a room of the house, shade, movement, freshness, materials and time of day all matter.

Two ways into the same world

When the garden becomes a room of the house, shade, movement, freshness, materials and time of day all matter.

01

Sharing the South

“We love entertaining, but the garden does not yet create the simple moments that gather people.”

Shade, seating and the right proximities create a convivial ritual rooted in the South.

02

The evening garden

“After dark, my garden disappears or becomes too brightly lit to feel gentle.”

Light, fragrance, freshness and movement create a subtle presence after sunset.

Other horizons

Each starting point connects a real situation with a clear promise. The right form is then composed with you around the garden.

The garden table

Create a naturally welcoming place for meals outdoors.

The holiday garden

Enjoy the garden from the moment you arrive, with care compatible with absence.

Landscape construction

“I want to transform my garden without managing the entire site myself.”

WHAT THIS CHANGES

Translate the vision into reality, with the right expertise and continuity from first line to final planting.

A beautiful idea is not enough. Quality comes from coherent decisions, coordinated expertise and constant attention to detail.

A beautiful idea is not enough. Quality comes from coherent decisions, coordinated expertise and constant attention to detail.

01

The site under our eye

“The contractors are chosen, but who will protect the whole and the details?”

Follow the landscape intention, coordinate sensitive points and help everyone decide at the right moment.

02

The final eye

“It is almost finished, but the garden does not yet feel complete.”

Review views, finishes, balance and use so a completed site becomes an accomplished garden.

Other horizons

Each starting point connects a real situation with a clear promise. The right form is then composed with you around the garden.

Pick up the thread

Find a clear way out of an interrupted or poorly started project.

Deliver in stages

Make every phase useful, beautiful and compatible with the next.

Unite the outdoor spaces

Give terrace, pool, gate, lighting and planting one language.

The final touch

Use targeted furniture, containers, materials and planting to add depth.

Garden roadmap

“Everything seems urgent and nothing forms a project.”

WHAT THIS CHANGES

A multi-year vision turns scattered interventions into ordered decisions: what to do, when and why.

The garden gains value when decisions, gestures and memory circulate between owner, caretaker, gardener and contractors.

01

Estate stewardship

“Several people work here, but no one carries the overall landscape vision.”

Direction, decisions, coordination and follow-up connect every intervention to one intention.

02

On-site knowledge-sharing

“The gardener knows the ground but lacks reference points for how the garden should evolve.”

Explain intention and seasonal gestures on site, building confidence while keeping knowledge within the property.

Other horizons

Each starting point connects a real situation with a clear promise. The right form is then composed with you around the garden.

Landscape direction

Carry the vision and keep several specialists aligned.

Seasonal advice

Receive clear priorities for the right gestures and timing.

The garden's first steps

Observe establishment and build good habits after creation.

Estate manual

Gather the spirit, sensitive zones and care principles in a living document.

Garden oversight

Maintain vigilance during absences and alert before issues settle in.

Entering spring

“The garden is waking. What should be restarted, pruned or left alone?”

WHAT THIS CHANGES

Selective clearing, soil care, considered pruning and a reading of needs prepare the garden to grow.

Intervening at the right moment prevents emergencies, protects plants and lets you enjoy the garden when it matters.

01

Before summer

“Summer is coming and the garden is neither ready to welcome nor protected from heat.”

A focused reset prepares what will be most visible, lived in and vulnerable.

02

Preparing winter

“After summer the garden looks tired, and I fear missing the right moment.”

Restore soils, support planting and prepare vulnerable areas before cold weather.

Other horizons

Each starting point connects a real situation with a clear promise. The right form is then composed with you around the garden.

Ready to welcome

Prepare the most lived-in areas for an approaching event.

Extend the season

Revive flowering, containers and outdoor rooms after summer.

The return of rain

Restart soils, check water movement and plant at the right time.

After the storm

Separate urgent safety from useful restoration after extreme weather.

Wood renewed

“My wooden furniture has greyed and makes the terrace feel neglected.”

WHAT THIS CHANGES

Appropriate cleaning, preparation and oil reveal the material without denaturing it.

The details touched and seen every day create the garden's feeling of care and deserve precise attention.

01

Stone & terraces

“Outdoor surfaces are dull or slippery, but I fear aggressive cleaning.”

Choose a method respectful of stone, joints and nearby planting so light returns without losing patina.

02

Composed containers

“My pots accumulate but no longer form a real terrace composition.”

Unite containers, volumes and plants in a coherent composition suited to exposure and care rhythm.

Other horizons

Each starting point connects a real situation with a clear promise. The right form is then composed with you around the garden.

Water under control

Align networks and programming with actual needs.

Living soil

Restore structure and fertility with restrained, suitable gestures.

Poolside care

Coordinate plants, materials and movement around water.

Evening light

Rebalance lighting and vegetation for a gentle atmosphere.

Seasonal flowering

Create coherent moments of colour and movement.

The right pruning

Recover silhouette, health and natural rhythm.

Bespoke garden care

“I want my garden to remain beautiful and coherent, not simply tidy.”

WHAT THIS CHANGES

Every action protects form, life and experience, so the garden gains character rather than wearing out.

Serenity comes from regular care that is never automatic, always adapted to seasons, uses and the place's evolution.

Two ways into the same world

Serenity comes from regular care that is never automatic, always adapted to seasons, uses and the place's evolution.

01

Serenity

“I want to enjoy the garden without carrying its entire mental load.”

Organise oversight, priorities and necessary interventions so the garden remains welcoming.

02

Garden oversight

“I am often away and discover problems only when they become urgent.”

Visits, vigilance and coordination keep the garden under control between stays.

Other horizons

Each starting point connects a real situation with a clear promise. The right form is then composed with you around the garden.

The Four Seasons

Four structuring visits adapt priorities to the garden's actual rhythm.

Estate care & direction

Connect the on-site team, contractors and landscape vision continuously.

Living refuge care

Adjust actions, timing and zones to protect biodiversity with elegance.

THE NEXT STEP BEGINS WITH A FRESH PERSPECTIVE

Let us talk about your garden.

You do not need to choose a service alone. Tell us about the place, what weighs on you today and what you would like to experience there tomorrow.

The right support

The one that makes the next decision simple and considered.
